About the Author

Edward Young was born in Upham, Hampshire, England, in 1683. He studied at Winchester College and Corpus Christi College, Oxford, where he developed a love of classical literature and philosophy.

Young's early career was marked by a series of unsuccessful theatrical productions. However, his literary reputation was established with the publication of 'The Universal Passion' (1725), a satirical poem that criticized the pursuit of wealth and power.

In 1742, Young published 'Night Thoughts,' a long and complex poem in nine books that explored the themes of death, immortality, and the search for God. The poem was an instant success and solidified Young's reputation as a major literary figure.

The poem is written in a loose and conversational style, and it is filled with vivid imagery and powerful rhetoric. Young's use of language is often striking and memorable, and his ability to convey complex philosophical and theological ideas in a clear and accessible way is truly remarkable.

'Night Thoughts' has been praised by critics for its depth of thought, its emotional intensity, and its beautiful language. The poem has been translated into many languages and has inspired generations of readers.
