

The All Together Quilt: A Work of Art and Community

The All Together Quilt is a unique and beautiful work of art that was created by a community of people from all walks of life. The quilt is made up of over 5,000 individual squares, each of which was designed and sewn by a different person. The squares are all different sizes and shapes, and they feature a wide variety of colors, patterns, and textures. The quilt is a testament to the power of community and the beauty that can be created when people work together.

The All Together Quilt was created by artist Lizzy Rockwell in collaboration with the American Folk Art Museum. The project was inspired by the 9/11 terrorist attacks, and it was intended to be a way to bring people together and promote healing. Rockwell collected squares from people all over the country, and she then assembled them into a single quilt. The quilt was first exhibited at the American Folk Art Museum in 2002, and it has since traveled to museums and galleries all over the world.
